Best One in the John MacArthur Pastor's Library

By Jason Vaughn

"Evangelism," written by the staff of Grace Community Church, is a great read for any person who wants to understand the believer's role in evangelism. The authors focus on theology first by giving the reader biblical knowledge to key doctrines essential in our role as ambassadors for Christ. The third section provides instruction on interacting with unbelievers.

One distinguishing characteristic to this book is its emphasis on church. Two sections explain the churches role and how to evangelize. The first section focuses on the pulpit while the last section emphasizes how to reach different people found within the church and world (like children, youth, special needs, social outcasts, and those addicted to substances). This last section makes the book distinct and yet draws our attention to the role of the church in evangelism.

"The key to biblical evangelism is not strategy or technique. It is not primarily about style, methodology, or programs and pragmatics. The first and preeminent concern in all our evangelism efforts must be the gospel" (vii-ix). MacArthur and company focus on the message and our mandate to proclaim the "Good News" to the world.

Fantastic Book. I had a new perspective on the subject after reading this book!

By M. Baldanza

I read this book as a task for my Sunday School Class discussion and was delighted by the way the subject is presented. I realized that I had a different perspective about evangelism and through this book, that shows us what the Word of God really means about evangelism, I could rethink my previous perception on the matter. The authors of the texts use the Bible as a definite source for their positions and we can use the references ourselves to further our knowledge and comprehension about what is being said. Pastor MacArthur wrote some of the articles in this book and as always is as clear and direct as no other author can these days. This is a must read for Christians to understand the proper definition of evangelism as something demanded by our God for us to be engaged on.

From a Lay Person

Over the years I have very much appreciated the scriptural teaching of John MacArthur. "Evangelism" is well written and very understandable. It gives very good guidelines as how to present a correct Gospel message.
