TICKS ALL THE BOXES

By Chloe

Lexie Syrah does not believe in holding back. When she writes an erotic story, she means it to be EROTIC, with capital letters; or, as she says, her 5000 word story that takes place on a billionaire's private plane on an eleven hour flight, is one long filthy scene - an orgy created by Mr Rand, the rich guy, with his do-anything goddess of an assistant Desirae, to seduce, torment and multi-penetrate their guests, Luke and the lovely Brianna, for the pure fun of doing it, and to pass the time on the long journey above the clouds. If sedx is your pleasure, then "The Flight" ticks all the boxes.

Mile-High Club

By Avid Reader

After reading about the flight in “The Billionaire’s Charity” I don’t know if I am man enough to fly with that crowd. If you want a quick, steamy erotic read that also qualifies for the Mile-High Club this is a read for you.

Close but not quite like reality

By CyraBernal

As a girl who struggles with these fantasies myself, I can say there are many realistic elements and many fake elements to Lexies writing. While the deep arousal and shame at these thoughts are present, the stories don't do a good job capturing the realism of the internal conflict.

In my experience, the arousal and shame come from not just imagining my fiancée with his ex, or even the humiliation of being forced to watch... It comes from an extension of my own self image. Where my breasts sag with large areola and stretch marks, hers I imagine to be firm, perky, and perfect. Where my butt has some cellulite, she has flawless tight cheeks. In this story, the women are all gorgeous with perfect bodies and no reason to be ashamed.

Lexie also spends too much time talking about the husband. In a cuckquean fantasy, I am first thinking about the more desirable qualities of my fiancée's ex, then about my own arousal and shame and then my fiancée's actions.

She does do a wonderful job describing the various people but should not neglect the emotion.
